Disability Scholarship Program

Definition of Disability

The definition used in this document is that prescribed in the Commonwealth Disability Discrimination Act 1992:

“Disability in relation to a person, means:

- total or partial loss of the person’s bodily or mental functions; or
- total or partial loss of a part of the body; or
- the presence in the body of organisms causing disease or illness; or
- the presence in the body of organisms capable of causing disease or illness; or
- the malfunction, malformation or disfigurement of a part of the person’s body; or
- disorder or malfunction that results in the person learning differently from a person without the disorder or malfunction; or
- a disorder, illness or disease that affects a person’s thought processes, perception of reality, emotions or judgement or that results in disturbed behaviour;

and includes a disability that:

- presently exists; or
- previously existed but no longer exists; or
- may exist in the future; or
- is imputed to a person.”

The disability may be permanent or temporary. It may exist from birth or be acquired in life. A person may have one disability or a number of disabilities. A person’s disability may be apparent, such as loss of a limb, or hidden, such as epilepsy or depressive illness.
